

EXPLORING SAUDI ARABIA'S RURAL GEM

Al-Qassim province, known as the “food basket” of Saudi Arabia, is a vibrant agricultural hub producing nearly a third of the Kingdom’s dates with its over 80 million palm trees. The province hosts the world’s largest date festival each year, but also grows wheat, citrus fruits, and vegetables.

Cities like Buraydah and Unaizah – with its famous camel market - offer a mix of tradition and modernity, with bustling markets and cafés.

The combination of fertile lands, favorable climate, and deep-rooted traditions in farming and livestock make Al-Qassim not only a leader in agriculture, but also a key destination for those seeking to experience Saudi Arabia’s vibrant agrarian culture.
